To drive in Saskatchewan you must hold a valid driver's licence.

In order to get a driver's licence, you must be able to operate a vehicle safely and properly, understand all traffic signs, and know the rules of the road.

You are required to complete a driver examination (written and road) if:

- You have never been a licensed driver
- You have not held a Saskatchewan driver's licence within the past five years
- You wish to change the class of your licence or obtain an endorsement; or
- You are a new resident, and the licence you hold is from another province, state or country not honoured in Saskatchewan.

Identification Requirements

The first time you apply for a Saskatchewan driver's licence, you will be asked to show documents that prove your identity, residency and entitlement to be in Canada.

These requirements align Saskatchewan with North American standards. Verifying identity, residency and entitlement to be in Canada before we issue a driver's licence helps to protect everyone in Saskatchewan from identity theft. It also ensures that Saskatchewan driver's licences are issued only to those who are legally in our country, whether as citizens or visitors.

Proving identity

You will need a minimum of two pieces of original identification to establish your:

- legal name
- complete birth date
- signature

Proving Saskatchewan residency

You will need a minimum of two supporting documents that prove you are a resident of Saskatchewan.

Proving entitlement to be in Canada

You will need one supporting document that proves you are legally entitled to be in Canada.

Acceptable documents

Documents used to prove identity, residency and entitlement to be in Canada must be from an authority such as the provincial or federal government or a federal agency, and must be the original (not photocopied).
